COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT: A CHALLENGING STRATEGY FOR SOCIAL CAPITAL, HEALTH PROMOTION, AND COMMUNITY SOCIAL WORK

Dr. Kleio Koutra*
TEI of Crete

ABSTRACT

The twenty-first century is making a turn towards community development and the value of community social work. International Association of Schools of Social Work (IASSW) places work in the community as the prevailing tendency for the future of social work. The community is of paramount importance to the lives of the people and that, automatically leads to the need of having the knowledge, skills, and abilities (KSAs) in community practice. This chapter discusses the common features shared by the method of community social work, social capital, and health promotion. That will give social workers the opportunity to improve and further develop the practice of their profession in the community. The model in this article highly acknowledges the benefits and the advantages of working with the strategy of community development, thus contributing to healthy communities capable of rebuilding and producing social capital.

Keywords: Social capital, health promotion, community social work

INTRODUCTION

Social capital appears to be a multidimensional resource derived from one's social networks, ties, and relations with other people and groups or communities (Koutra, Orfanos, Roumeliotaki, Kritsotakis, Kokkevi, & Philalithis, 2012a). The meaning of social capital in the last decades has firmly connected to the prevention and health promotion (Wakefield &
